To Those Who Died That We May Live In Freedom

Within these halls in years gone by, their talk
And noisy laughter floated happily
From room to room where we, forgetting, walk.
Their names are echoes now from that far sea
Beyond our knowing; yet they left behind,
Engraved with fame, the silver trophies won.
Their honor lingers ever to remind
Our newer stars that glory once begun
Must be upheld. And yet, within our hearts,
We do not hold in memory alone
Their deeds, but something greater, which imparts
Desire to keep what they had always known
As peace. They live forever in our eyes—
Symbols of hope we yet may realize!

FOREWORD

As we who at present attend Southwest feel, for the first time during our high school experience, the reigning spirit of peace, it seems fitting that we should begin to look with greater vision to the future and that we should construct for ourselves new heights of achievement. When we strive to achieve high standards in all fields, we wish to attain, not the materialistic symbols of glory, but rather a sense of pride in a job well-done. Throughout the years, our school curriculum has been patterned after this idea,—that by learning to work together, by practicing student government, and by pursuing those subjects of particular interest and value to us, we may develop our minds and skills in ways which will enable us to live our lives to the fullest. So it is, that the Sachem staff of 1946 has attempted to portray on these pages our quest for a well-rounded life at Southwest in this, our first year of peace.

Once upon a time, high on the hill of education, there stood a great red school house with big white pillars. The students, happy that the long war was over, vowed that this year they would try harder than ever to achieve fame and honor for their alma mater. But before we go on with this story, let us present its characters — the faculty and classes which made up Southwest in that memorable year.

Faculty

Behind every activity at Southwest stand the faculty who, besides helping us to advance scholastically, give countless hours of extra work to make possible such activities as the numerous clubs, plays, assemblies, the Student Council and the Red Cross, and every other organization or institution found at Southwest. This year, although we have lost several fine teachers, we are happy to welcome others to the staff. These include Mr. Frank L. Stark, Mr. J. Carlson, and Mr. Edward F. Thelen, returned veterans; Miss Mary Johnston; Mrs. Robert Milton and Miss Florence Griffith, who have shared the classes of Miss Alice Lanterman, at present completing a history of Kansas City to be used in the elementary schools; and Miss Dorothy Canham. Other new members of the organization at Southwest are Mrs. Carl Foster, accompanist for the vocal department; Miss Marietta Hall, registrar, and Mrs. Virginia Kammerer, clerk; and Mrs. Frances Romine, cafeteria manager. All of these have already found welcome places in Southwest life. We hope their faces will remain permanently among the familiar faces in the memories of our alma mater.

CHARTER MEMBER OF FACULTY RETIRES

Southwest misses the warm smile and genuine friendliness which so characteristically marked the presence among us of Mr. S. C. See, a prominent figure in Southwest life since its beginning in 1925, who has retired this year. Always kind and helpful, he is beloved by faculty and students alike.

Mr. See's deep knowledge of his subject and his success in his classroom won him the admiration of all, though it was in another capacity that he was best known to the school at large. Not involved solely in the complicated formulae and intricate reactions of the world of chemistry, he served for many years as business manager of athletics and was a familiar figure at pep assemblies.

His interest, however, went beyond that of the business affairs of athletics; it embraced not only the boys of the teams but also the entire school. He made the annual athletic department dinners occasions long to be remembered by the boys, their dads, and the men of the faculty. Under his direction the field house was built on the athletic field, the trees and shrubbery surrounding the field were set out, and the rose bushes were planted along the fence. Now, from his home opposite Southwest, he can look across and enjoy the beauty which he created.

It is our wish that he will always consider himself a part of the school which is so deeply indebted to him.

EDITH C. HUMPHREYS

Miss Edith C. Humphreys, valued for her many years of service to Southwest as manager of our cafeteria and especially well-remembered for her famous chili and, before the war, for her turkey dinners, has retired in order that she may devote herself more fully to her friends and her hobbies. An ardent member of her church and a crochet expert, she has many interests to engage her time. Faculty and pupils, alike, heartily wish her the joy and success which she richly deserves.

Seniors

After four long years the freshman class of 1942 is at last ready for its long-awaited graduation. Our high school years have been full of pleasure despite the fact that the first three were years of war. We have worked, although many of us not exceedingly hard, and have gained through this an ability to attack problems, to work them out, and to reap the benefits. We are probably the only ones who will long remember the accomplishments of the past year, but we will recall them with a sense of pride—knowing what difficulties we overcame, what successes we achieved, and what good times we had, as they were in the making. We know that our years in high school have developed within us basic qualities which, while at present intangible, will manifest themselves in future years. And so we face the future with a feeling of satisfaction, ready for whatever it may hold, and confident that, whether happiness or sorrow, success or disappointment, lies ahead of us, we are prepared to meet it with the strength and ability which four years at Southwest have given us.

O Youth, the world is in your hands
A tragedy of war, it still Remembers peace and understands
Life's formerly ecstatic thrill

From you mankind derives its hope
For lasting bonds of harmony;
Yours is the future's horoscope,
And yours is opportunity.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be addressed. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. The second step is to gather relevant information and resources. This may involve researching existing solutions, consulting with experts, or collecting data.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to solve the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable parts and determining the best approach for each part.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress to ensure that the solution is effective.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results and make adjustments as needed. This involves comparing the actual outcomes with the expected results and identifying any areas for improvement.

6. The final step is to document the process and results. This involves creating a record of the steps taken, the resources used, and the outcomes achieved, which can be used for future reference.

EIGHTH GRADE

An eighth grade has taken its place at Southwest this year. Despite a small enrollment, it has been well organized under Mrs. Robert W. Milton during the first semester, and Miss Florence Griffith, the second semester. A fine group of officers has led the class in participation in many student activities, including Student Council, the Red Cross Council, and the Trail and Sachem.

Many of the members of the class have been transferred from other cities which already have eighth grade systems. There are representatives from foreign countries, as well as from nearly every section of the United States.

A wide interesting course of study is offered to these students—English, social studies, spelling, arithmetic, science, geography, music, physical education, foods for the girls and wood work for the boys.

We are happy to welcome these eighth graders to Southwest, and are anticipating big things from them in the next four years.

In the fall, as green leaves changed to gold, and the days grew shorter and shorter, the students began their great task. Fresh from summer fun, they began to plan a record of achievement which, they resolved, would surpass any of former years.

SOUTHWEST R.O.T.C. AS HONOR GUARD TO HERO

"They finished their job . . . Let's finish ours . . ." This slogan struck the keynote of Kansas City's Victory Loan Drive which was high-lighted by the celebration of General Jonathan M. Wainwright Day, November 6, 1945.

Although November 6 was the day of the parade, November 5 was the red letter day for the Southwest Indians, for it was on that day that the Southwest R.O.T.C. cadets met General Wainwright at the Municipal Airport where they acted as guard of honor. The stirring music of the Central High School band lent a festive air to the occasion. As General Wainwright stepped from his plane, the cadets presented arms for the inspection which was to follow. Thus ended the prelude to the big celebration which took place the next day.

Bright and early the following morning, the R.O.T.C. was again on hand, this time accompanied by the Southwest band. In company with twenty-seven units from the other schools, our representatives marched in the Wainwright parade and returned to school later in the day, proud of their part in honoring the "hero of Corregidor."

THE TEAM TAKES TO THE FIELD

Record Southwest crowds watched a game Indian squad battle to fourth place against stronger, more experienced teams. Coaching his lightest Redskin team in twenty-one years at Southwest, Coach Louis A. House praised the hustle and willingness to play in this year's eleven, which claimed only three returning lettermen.

SOUTHWEST 33, BISHOP HOGAN 0

Combining a rushing and passing attack, Southwest raised the curtain on its 1945 football season by crushing the Hogan Rams 33-0.

SOUTHWEST 7, NORTHEAST 12

Southwest gave the champion Vikings a surprise scare in their season opener at Ruppert Stadium. It looked like a possible Indian victory when Howard Nearing smashed over for a Brave tally after Chenev Klose blocked a Northeast punt on their own 1. However, the Vikings managed to run up 12 points which Southwest failed to overcome.

SOUTHWEST 35, MANUAL 0

The Indians scored a decisive victory over the hapless Cardinals in Manual's return to Interscholastic league football. The Redskin eleven swiped six passes and recovered four Manualite bobbles in obtaining the lopsided score. Aided by excellent interference, Schutzel dashed 54 yards for the first Indian tally. Touchdowns followed fast and furiously, including center Farrel's runback of an intercepted pass.

SOUTHWEST 0, CENTRAL 19

Central capitalized on intercepted passes and Indian fumbles to rack up 19 points. Southwest failed to score but often threatened the Eagle goal. In the closing seconds Bancroft Tapp grabbed an aerial from Klein and raced to the Central 2. The final gun sounded before another play could be made.

SOUTHWEST 0, SOUTHEAST 7

The Redskin line, sparked by Conklin Price, Barnett, and Klose showed to good advantage in holding the heavy Knights to 7 points in a hard-fought contest, sprinkled with numerous penalties. The lone Brave threat came on Owens 33 yard toss to Schutzel to place the ball on the Southeast 27. The chance ended with a fumble on the next play.

SOUTHWEST 6, EAST 0

Southwest came back into the win column by defeating the favored East Bears. The lone tally came when Bob Danneberg scored on two plays after Nearing had run the ball 16 yards to the East 4. Center Rolphe Lundgren stopped a Bear threat in the final quarter by intercepting a pass.

FOOTBALL PORTRAITS

DANNENBERG . . . Because of his playing and coaching team work, Bill was elected captain of the 1965 squad. This year, the Dutchman brought victory to Southwest in the East conference by scoring the lone touchdown.

SOUTHWEST 19, PASCO 6

Before a cheering Southwest crowd, the Indians scalped Pasco to the tune of 19-6, despite the absence of many warriors due to illness. The game sparkled with exciting plays: Bill Chase's recovery of a Pasco fumble on their own 18; Allan Jewell's 61-yard touchdown run, and numerous excellent punts by quarterback Klein.

SOUTHWEST 33, WESTPORT 0

With all the points scored in the first half against a poor Tiger defense, Southwest dashed off several beautiful touchdown runs. Dannenberg ran over from the Westport 10 for the first tally, the second came when Klein ran 61 yards for another touchdown. Jewell hit pay dirt from the Bengal 27 following Danny's 64-yard set up run. Klein scored again with a 79-yard dash and Barnett ran an intercepted pass back 22 yards for the final counter.

Bob Pearson and Dick Locker assisted by Bill Harp and Don Wheelock were managers of the teams.

FIRST TEAM Quarterback Klein Running Back Chase Fullback Dannenberg Wide Receiver Jewell End Barnett Linebacker Harp Defensive Back Locker Kicker Pearson Punter Chase

BARNETT — Wornie, All-Star honorable mention. Harvey proved his worth by ably holding down his tackle position.

CHASE — Bill, a runner, played the season at guard. He was a rugged player both on offense and defense.

CONNOR H. 1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be changed.

2. The second step is to set goals. These should be specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-bound.

3. The third step is to develop a plan. This involves determining the steps that need to be taken to achieve the goals.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing whether the goals have been achieved and what lessons can be learned.

SECOND TEAM FOOTBALL

Proving more successful than their big brothers, the Southwest bravelets, under the direction of Coach Francis Mann, came through with five wins and only two losses in the Interscholastic league season.

The seconds crushed the younger Vikings 38-0 in their opening encounter. Phil Cohen started the scoring, succeeding Jerry Frieling's recovery of a North-east fumble. Moe Rollert followed with three counters and Cohen and Reese scored the remaining two.

The final gun found Southwest ahead 34-0 in the Manual game. Cohen and Rollert monopolized the touchdowns with three for the former and two for the latter. John Shoup and Jack Wood shone on the defense. They suffered their first defeat at the hands of Southeast; the score, 7-0.

Back in the win column, the Southwest seconds massacred East, 34-0. Tapp, Rollert, Shoup and Kemp led the team to victory. Continuing on the victory bandwagon, the Redskins copped a 16-0 win over Central. Cohen's 85-yard touchdown dash highlighted the game. Jim Schmidt's aerial to Henry Kemp brought the second touchdown.

The bravelets downed Pasco 27-12 in their best game of the season. Jim Schmidt broke into the touchdown column with a fourth period counter. Southwest was defeated by the Westport seconds 12-6 in the final contest. The lone Indian score resulted from Cohen's toss to Kemp, who went over for the touchdown.

Second squad letter winners were: Shoup, DeMunn, Abbey, Cohen, Kemp, Willard, Wood, Schmidt, Rollert, Staats, Saunders, Frieling, Nelson, Beals, Marsh and Rush.

NETMEN SET THE PACE

The Southwest tennis team showed to fine advantage in attaining the runner-up spot, second only to Southeast. Both Norman Apple and the Ernie Straub. Frank Jones doubles team reached the finals in the Interscholastic league contest at the Plaza courts.

The Braves had only two returning lettermen in Apple and Harold Titus. Next year's squad, though, will be well-populated with second year men as five will be back to try to win the champion-

Apple defeated Johnny Baum at Westport 6-8, 6-1 to capture the league's singles championship after smothering three earlier opponents. The doubles team also waded through three tries only to fall before the Pack, Soxmen duo from Southeast 6-5, 6-8.

Harold Titus was defeated by Baum, 8-6, 6-3, in the opening rounds. Dick Griffith and Bob Silkett made up Southwest's other doubles team. In an exciting first round game they fell 8-6, 4-6, 6-3, to the Knights' Pack, Soxman duet.

GOLFERS TEE OFF

Twelve candidates answered Coach Melvin Bishop's call for golf enthusiasts. Although no 1945 lettermen returned, the golf-minded hopefuls stacked up impressive records in the opening rounds, low scores of 76 and 77 being tallied by Eagle and Matteson, respectively.

After the tryouts at the Armour Fields links, it was decided that Tom Davidson, Art Gilbert, Bob Lagle, Fred Dwyer, and George Matteson were to represent the Indians in the Interscholastic league tournament.

Southwest wound up fourth in the league standings with 1,587 points. Southeast was first, 85 points away from the nearest opponent, with 1,418. Pasco and Westport were next with 1,535 and 1,559 points, respectively. Central was at the bottom with 1,096 tallies.

Allman of the Knights was low point man of the tournament. On the Redskin team, Matteson scored 261, Lagle 102, Dwyer 209, Davidson 221, and Gilbert 301.

THE STAGE CREW TAKES THE SPOTLIGHT

One of the hardest working and most applauded organizations at Southwest is the Stage Crew. This loyal group labors for many hours to adapt the scenery to whatever production is under way. In addition, they must attend all rehearsals in order to know when to open the curtain, dim the lights or produce the correct sound effects. To the uninitiated, the mazes of ropes are confusing, to say the least, the switchboard is worse than a Chinese puzzle, the crew suggests a wild woman, which, perhaps, takes its daily strolls on the catwalk. However, the veteran stage crew member is familiar with all the apparatus necessary to make Southwest's programs the fine pieces of workmanship which appear on our stage.

AN EVENING OF "MAKE BELIEVE"

REDSKIN REVELS OF 1945

*"We will make believe this evening
That we're on the radio—"*

As the lilting voice of Kitty Walter introduced to us the land of "Make Believe," the curtain rose to reveal an immense television studio filled with the traditional bevy of beauties, the Hour of Charm. Following a violin solo by Patsy Schraub, the Glee Club sang an enticing arrangement of "Night and Day." As the lights were dimmed, Marvonne Heuermann danced to the strains of "Black Magic" and "Mood Indigo." The Boys' Trio sang "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" while nine girls, one by one in fashion show style, demonstrated the truth of the statement

From this scene of beauty, we switched our dials to a special program coming to us from Carnegie Hall. Here, Bill Straight gave a magnificent performance of Chopin's famous "Polonaise in A Flat," and proved to be a strong competitor for Jose Iturbi's present eminence.

From Carnegie Hall, we were taken on our journey to the "Raven Room" where "Hildegard" Hawes held forth as master of ceremonies, presenting as guests Ray Martin, the Mystery Man, Johnny Pearce, the Fred Astaire of tomorrow, and Professor Jack Wells, who lectured on atomic power.

With a twist of the dial, we took a quick jaunt South of the Border where

The Bit Three—Castle Espenett, and Script

we were entertained by four dancing señoritas, Dick Telaneus on the marimba, and Mary Jean Randolph, in her colorful gypsy dance.

After intermission, Jim Grimes and his band beat out some boogie woogie from which Jim Charno took his cut for a fast tap number. Dick Scott followed with Artie Shaw's difficult "Concerto for Clarinet."

Next we were switched to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera. By such illustrious stars as Shirley Carpenter and Jim Hawes, we were introduced to Verdi's "Il Traviatore" which was already in progress.

Leaving the classics for the wide open spaces, the audience heard Jack Gentry play "Sunrise Serenade" on his accordion. Janet Coulter and Bob Manly sang "Along the Navajo Trail."

As the sound of hoofs died away in the distance, we turned our dials until we heard the voice of Charles Robinson, master of ceremonies for the Star Performance, come to us as he introduced to us their first guest of the evening, Cynthia Wildman. Cynthia performed a clever "Gigue." The next guest, Marian Rippeteau presented controversy in the field of entertainment as she played her own piano arrangement of "Beethoven vs. Boogie." Joan Robinson followed with a dance as might be portrayed by a German doll. A glittering choir gave an unforgettable performance of "If I Loved You." Delores Flasco made an alluring South Sea Island belle as she danced to "Aloa Oe."

A delightful evening was brought to a close as Gerry Cushing's voice repeated the call letters of the station and the entire cast sang "We have made believe this evening."

SOUTHWEST GOES ON THE AIR

THIS IS NOT MAKE-BELIEVE!

Thursday afternoon, February 14, 1946, the students of Southwest witnessed an assembly which opened a series of similar programs in the high schools of Kansas City. This program, a quiz show called "It Pays To Be Smart," was presented on WHB and was sponsored by the University of Kansas City.

Six Southwest students participated in the program. They were: John Campbell, Patty Cockerell, Suzanne Espenett, Dick Houston, Jo Anne Labhart, and Dick Scott. The contestants were chosen as outstanding students in the social studies classes. Jo Anne Labhart received the first prize, a $25 savings bond; Suzanne Espenett was awarded the second prize of $10; John Campbell, a close third, received $5.

The mechanics of the program were particularly interesting to the student audience, because two former students and graduates, Don Coplin and William Rothwell, acted as time keeper and announcer, respectively. Many remember Don for his outstanding speechwork.

In consideration of the difficulty of the questions presented Southwest was very proud of the fine performance of her six students.

WE SHARE THE CHAMPIONSHIP

Southwest landed at the top of the Interscholastic league basketball heap for the first time in six years, sharing honors with their traditional rival, Northeast.

The Braves dropped their hoop opener to their fellow Indians from Shawnee Mission. Shawnee was ahead all the way, but a final quarter drive brought Southwest within two points of a tie, and there they stayed, the final score, 27 to 25. De La Salle was their first victim. The Braves scored 10 points in the final period to win, 33 to 22. After a close first half the Indians pulled in front of Rosedale to win, 20 to 12. An excited crowd watched as Southwest lost a rough, hard-fought struggle to Rockhurst, the score, 27 to 21.

Central was the first of the Interscholastic league teams to fall before the Indian onslaught. It was a tight battle all the way, with Phil Klein's three points in the closing seconds clinching a 36 to 32 win for the Indians.

Southwest fell to its first and only league defeat at the hands of Paseo. 31 to 34 was the final score in a tense battle, with Rogoff and Klein hitting some sparkling long shots. Ralph Moon, tall Indian pivot man, contributed 16 points to the 45 scored by Southwest as they trampled Westport, 45 to 25.

The contest with Southeast was one of the most exciting and hard-fought of the season. The score was tied 10 times to bring Southwest Scalpers screaming to their feet. Corbett and Bartlett started the Southwest offense rolling early in the game. The two teams traded baskets during the first three quarters, with the Knights ahead, 32 to 29. In the final period, Rogoff scored two field goals and Moon a free throw to tie the game at 34-all. In the closing minutes goals by Klein and Moon put the game in the bag with Southwest winning, 42 to 38.

The Braves came through their most crucial game the victors over last year's champion, Northeast. The Vikings' impressive record held no awe for the Indian five as they pushed into the lead in the opening minutes of the game and stayed there to win the battle, 36 to 29. Moon was high point man with 17 to his record. Bartlett's nearly faultless play, together with his constant stealing of rebounds from towering opponents, contributed strongly to the Southwest victory.

The Indians swept Manual out of the 6-way tie for first place by a 36 to 32 score. Bartlett and Bruce Webb, Manual scoring ace, traded shots in the initial period and Phil Klein tossed three accurate long shots to shine in the second quarter. Bill Chase, new to the varsity team, was also an important asset in winning the game that clinched at least a co-championship for the Redskins.

Southwest rolled over the lowly East Bears, 39 to 22, in the final game of the season. Ralph Moon scored 18 points for high scoring honors.

A great deal of credit for putting forth a winning team is due to its managers for their diligence and hard work. Marvin Atha, Charley Hall, Dick Griffith, and Jim Weimer are the boys who helped to bring this year's squad out on top.

BILL CHASE . . . This sturdy guard broke into the starting line up after his impressive showing in the important clash with Northeast. Bill is only a junior and will be a splendid asset on next season's squad

JIM CORBETT . . . Tall, six feet four inches, Jim was shifted to guard after winning a letter at center last year. He was a steady performer making some fine shots, besides playing well on the defensive

PHIL KEFIN . . . Through his cool-headedness and proficient ball handling, Phil was elected to the second All-Star team and the sensational long shots of this scrappy junior often brought the crowds cheering to their feet

RALPH MOON . . . The high scoring of this tall Indian pivot man was often the difference between victory and defeat. Because of his steady performance and timely baskets, Ralph was awarded a second team All Star position

DON OWENS . . . An aggressive forward, Don was always in the thick of battle. His hustle and teamwork were of importance in gaining victories.

BILL POLACK . . . A towering six foot six inch center, Bill was one of the tallest boys in the league. His accurate baskets and consistently good playing aided in capturing the championship

MARVIN ROGOFF . . . At his forward position, Marvin was an outstanding contribution to the Southwest scoring machine. He is a cool basketeer under pressure and hit some sparkling long shots throughout the season

CHARLES TELL . . . This tall guard played a fine game and saw a good share of the action. Charles was a constant threat to goal-bound opponents

SECOND TEAM BASKETBALL

The hard-playing Bravelets on the second squad often go unapplauded and unrecognized in a season that finds fans cheering the first team on to victories. These junior contests, however, are not only exciting to the onlookers but also provide a training field for prospective first team players.

Our second team has always held an enviable record and this season was no exception, as they won seven victories and suffered only three defeats.

The seconds opened the season by overpowering the East Bearcubs, 30 to 15, but then dropped a thriller to Rosedale, 20 to 22, with Southwest fouls proving costly. In the third pre-season battle they tripled the Hawklets' score in defeating Rockhurst, 30 to 10.

The Bravelets, sparked by Marvin Rogoff and Banny Tapp, took an early lead in their first Interscholastic contest and kept ahead to trip Central, 19 to 10. The seconds from Paseo, only school to defeat our first team quintet, fell to the younger Indians, 23 to 19.

Their first league defeat came at the hands of Westport, the score 31 to 24. Back in the winning column, the seconds squeezed past the Southeast Knights, 25 to 23, with Chase, Abbey, Moskovitz, and Rollert showing to good advantage.

The junior Northeast Vikings were Southwest's next victims in a hard-fought 26 to 25 contest. Despite a first-half Bravelet lead, the Cardinals from Manual pushed ahead in the latter half to win, 26 to 23.

Southwest then ended the season as they began it, by crushing East, winding up on the long end of a 28 to 15 score.

SWIMMERS RACE TO VICTORY

The Southwest tankmen, under the direction of Coach Roy Means, splashed into the swimming championship to replace Paseo as city title-holders.

Northeast first fell to the Indian paddlers, 36 to 21, but the Vikings came back later to sink the Redskin crew, 34 to 23.

Manual dropped two meets to Southwest by 48 to 9 and 35 to 32 scores. In the first meet Robin McGeorge and Russell Jones set new school records in 100-yard breast stroke and 100-yard back stroke, respectively.

The speedy Indian crew then scuttled Paseo twice, 30 to 27 each time. In the last contest, the Southwest web-footers broke five school records. Wvandotte was the second school to overcome the Braves, the score 35 to 22.

Then came the big event of the aquatic season, the swimming contest at the Kansas City Athletic Club. Southwest came through to win the deciding event, the 200-yard free style relays, to capture the meet with 44 points.

WINTER KEEPS THE GIRLS INDOORS

During the fall, Southwest girls enjoyed themselves playing hockey and soccer in the warm autumn air; but, with old man winter raging outside, the Indian maidens found fun and relaxation in the gymnasium at invigorating cold weather sports. Basketball and volley ball topped the list in popularity, both in the classes and after school, but the new extra curricular sports of bowling and ice skating also proved great attractions.

Squad leaders, chosen each semester, aided in taking attendance and organizing teams. Many girls helped in the gymnasium office during their study halls.

This year the basketball clinic was held at Southwest. Physical education teachers from all parts of the city watched an exhibition game played between Southwest teams, and discussed rules and regulations for use in the annual basketball play-day at Junior College.

The sports-days, held for most major activities, enable girls to match wits and skill with teams from other high schools, although no winners are picked. Southwest lassies vie for positions on the teams for excitement and fun and also to aid themselves in winning the coveted "school letter," which is received after acquiring a large and small shield, besides excelling in four major and two minor sports and serving four managerial posts.

It is not necessary that a girl be enrolled in physical education to participate in intra-mural sports, as any Red-skin maiden may take part in the activities.

Miss Dorothy Canham, Miss Marie Pusateri, and Mrs. Frances Richart, instructors, helped the girls in developing healthy minds and bodies.

CHRISTMAS VESPER SERVICE

The annual Christmas Vesper Service was presented at Southwest this year on Sunday, December 23. The stage, decorated with poinsettias and pine boughs, provided a beautiful setting for the beloved Christmas story. Various scenes from the familiar tale were pantomimed on a small stage within the stage, while the choir, glee club, and orchestra spread the Christmas spirit through the medium of traditional Yuletide music. Both patrons and students of Southwest agreed that the Vespers were an inspiring introduction to the Christmas holidays.

THERE'S MUSIC IN THE AIR

SOUTHWEST BAND

With its outstanding orange and brown uniforms, trimmed in spotless white, the band still holds its own among popular organizations at Southwest. Under the able direction of Mr. Alvin Stephens, it has often added to the school spirit, especially with its rousing marches and snappy drills at football games.

Concert work occupies the attention of the band with the end of the basketball season. To prove its versatility, it plays to perfection both boogie woogie and dignified concert pieces. In addition to gaining music appreciation and instruction for themselves, the members in turn provide entertainment for others, and many have been given the opportunity to play solos before large audiences. The band's entertaining assembly programs, with their variety of numbers, are especially well-received, and we are always proud to have it represent Southwest in any parade or civic program.

The achievements of a tip-top band come only with plenty of hard work, cooperation, friendly spirit and pride in work well done. Many fall mornings has our band played and drilled on the football field, and during the regular band hour, also. Results have been shown in colorful, precise formations at the games when the band has been led by its two capable drum majors. That it is well-versed in harmony and tonal balance, and is adaptable to various types of music not only under faculty director but also under student director, is proved further during the concert season, when the student director sometimes takes over.

In addition to these activities in which the band has participated as a whole, two of its members have won honors in outside competition. George Matteson and Allen Jewell, both prominent in the trombone section, received very superior and superior ratings, respectively, in the Federated Music Contest.

Southwest is justly proud of its band, for no matter what job it tackles, with that feeling of "one for all, all for one" it has become an organization that is popular whenever and wherever it plays.

SOUTHWEST ORCHESTRA

The Southwest Orchestra, an organization which, under the direction of Mr. George Keenan, brings a great deal of honor to the school, affords the Indians ample reason for pride. To a wandering Indian, the orchestra seems to be almost omnipresent.

One night he may behold them, in formals and dark suits, as they perform the overture to the all-school play; another evening, he may hear of them in an unfamiliar auditorium in a different section of town taking part in an orchestra festival.

As the Southwest student continues his travels, he may come upon this same group spreading the Christmas spirit at the annual Vesper service, entertaining at an assembly, or filling in the intermission at the senior play.

The most important appearance of the year is the graduation ceremony in June, when the traditional strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" herald the last exercise of the departing seniors.

Many Southwest orchestra members have been honored by outside recognition: Sally Trembly tied for first place in the Kansas City Musical Club Scholarship Contest for the violin; Patsy Schraub received superior rating in the preliminaries of the same contest; Graham Hamrick played bass viol this past year in the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra. With the talent of these people and of other equally gifted young musicians, it is no wonder that Southwest's orchestra has in 1946, as always before, taken its place among the best in the city. As an integral part of the life of Southwest, it is a fine example of cooperation and loyalty to the group and to the school.

WE INTEND TO PROVE . . .

"Resolved: That every able-bodied male citizen of the United States should have one year of full-time military training before attaining age 24." It sounds formidable, doesn't it? Nevertheless, that is the topic upon which sixteen of Southwest's valiant souls expended their voices and intellects. These students were chosen from the third year speech and public speaking classes.

At Manual and Paseo, eight of our team members opposed eight of their representatives in a series of four debates. In return, those two schools sent students to Southwest to engage the remainder of our team in solemn deliberation and exposition.

Since decisions were not given, no team can be called the champion. The students debated for the practice of speaking in public. The topic was one of interest to the team, since many of the members might be affected in the next few years by legislation concerning conscription. Their mastery of the rules, and procedure of debate together with their speaking experience and research, will help to prepare Southwest's debaters on their way upward in the world.

Twenty Years From Now

In years to come at Northwest High,
The change will be paid
To keep up with the modern times
And not to be paid

Good new for those who want to win
And not to get a fat
For a lot of the winning jobs
The winners are the fat

A new and better way to live
And not at Northwest
With big size shoes made for fat
Are that to be paid

New to this school it means to be Another change is known
For every hand is caught
Each one has a share

New student here at Northwest High
Will ever not a star
For a lot of the students
To wear and wear and fear

What a life for high school kids
With cakes in every room
And constant loud music
To chase out study goons

Since marks will be the best
The girls will be the queens
And all the kids will come to school
In big black mousines

At Northwest High the day goes fast
For school will start at nine
With twenty minute intervals
And no sleeping time

Spring came early that year with yellow jonquils and crocuses showing their heads as early as March. But, although the magic outdoor world beckoned invitingly, the boys and girls remembered work before play and set about, with renewed energy, to finish their tasks, that they might greet the summer with minds free from duties.

SPRING FEVER SWEEPS SCHOOL

As the days grow longer and warmer, and springtime takes on many pleasant aspects, a decided restlessness overcomes the student body. One need not venture far to find a baseball game in progress or to see the diligent drilling of the R.O.T.C. in preparation for its annual field day. Crowds of dandelion-diggers can often be glimpsed, working with an energy that marks them as spring-fever victims.

To rid our alma mater of the dandelion nuisance, the students of Miss Klecman's second hour senior class betook themselves to the front lawn. With special implements, knives, or even bare hands, the army of golden blossoms was uprooted. The class soon found, however, that their energetic attempts seemed only to encourage the appearance of more yellow spots on the green background.

As the nostalgia of springtime has affected these enthusiastic members of the school, so has it affected us all. With the shining sun and blue skies overhead, the outdoors is calling us and we lend a ready ear.

PASSING IN REVIEW

As in years past, the R. O. T. C., under the direction of Master Sergeant William A. Story, is continuing to train young men to become good citizens and to qualify for positions of leadership, in order to make them more capable to preserve the peace which has been won.

It offers to the boys of Southwest practical, as well as theoretical, training in all phases of military life, such as rifle marksmanship, map reading, courtesy, patrolling, sanitation, and first aid. This year a new method of instruction has been introduced, that of visual education. The cadets learn through movies and actual illustrations, which add to the interest of the course.

Again this year Southwest was honored by having an executive officer of the Kansas City High School Regiment, Cadet Lieutenant Colonel William Meier.

In the government inspections, Southwest has for fourteen years been awarded the highest honor possible, that of "Honor School."

The important R. O. T. C. events began late in February with the annual R. O. T. C. Ball. Carolyn Ogden reigned, with attendants Shirley Munford and Susan Shook, as queen among the snappy uniforms and colorful formals. The next event was the popular and lavish R. O. T. C. circus at the Municipal Auditorium.

The Kansas City cadets then climaxed their year of training in the annual Field Day. Each school vied for the coveted position of best-drilled school.

Southwest has an enviable record in all R. O. T. C. activities, and under the direction of its able instructor will continue to train young men for the future.

CRACK SHOTS TAKE HONORS

For the third consecutive year, Southwest marksmen captured first place in the all-city rifle matches. Led by Captain Bill Meier, the Indian team clinched the title in the final round of the contests, December 10.

The matches were held in four rounds: sitting, prone, kneeling, and standing. In the first turn, November 19, the Red-skin crew scored 283 out of 300 for third place, with Bill Paxton and Harry Weddendorf topping the Brave scores with 48 points. The remaining rounds were held November 26 and December 3.

The R.O.T.C. squad scored 1,006 out of a possible 1,200 points, with Bill Meier, Dick Raidt, Harry Weddendorf, Howard Woosley, Kenneth Ramsey, and Bill Paxton high point men on the Red-skin team.

In the finishing battle Southeast and Southwest were deadlocked, and a re-shooting was necessary to determine the victor. Southeast took second place, East third, and Manual fourth.

Those on the squad who received medals were: Raidt, Meier, Weddendorf, Woosley, Ramsey, Paxton, Bob Brownlee, Bill Breece, Jerry Kreeger, and Milton Mann, with Meier, Raidt, Woosley, and Ramsey also qualifying for expert marksman rating.

In addition to interscholastic combats, the team contested the Seventh Service, and William Chrisman and St. Joseph high schools. The Indians also contributed members for the Kansas City Regimental Rifle Team.

Southwest has good reason to be proud of its rifle team which has consistently made good showings throughout the years.

RUNNERS, TO YOUR MARK!

The Southwest trackmen, coached by Louis House, emerged victorious in the 1945 season as they captured the interscholastic league championship for the second successive year.

After trailing East and Northeast in the Big Six track meet, the Indian speedsters pushed ahead to win the dual meets and finally outpointed opponents in the all-city battle on the Southwest track.

In dual contests the Redskins trampled East 58 to 33, overpowered Paseo 65 to 26, rolled over Central 55½ to 35½, and were victorious over Southeast with a score of 60 to 31.

Three thousand spectators watched Southwest live up to expectations in the city-wide battle in May. The Indians outscored their nearest rival, Northeast, by ten points, with 41 marks to their credit.

In the quarter-mile event Jim Whitacre, ahead all the way, breasted the tape in 51.6, to out-distance all opponents. Teammate Jim Marshall, undefeated in high hurdles, continued on his winning way, and the crack Redskin 880-yard relay team, consisting of Jack Halper, Howard Nearing, Emil Schutzel, and Jim Whitacre, outdashed opposing schools in 1:33.1.

The team captured a first in every field event. Don Nickell won the shot put; Howard Nearing, the broad jump. Bob Timmons triumphed in the high jump and tied Southeast for first in the pole vault. Southwest then placed fifth in the state meet at St. Louis with the Indian medley relay winning first in the most exciting race of the afternoon.

SPRING SPORTS

With the coming of spring also comes a climax to the girls' activities when minor and individual sports vie for the spotlight with the ever popular baseball.

BADMINTON

The business of hitting the shuttlecock cross the net proves an engaging one.

HAND TENNIS

The rules and scoring of this game are similar to those of regular tennis; but the game is hand tennis, which is supplying a great deal of enjoyment to these two Southwesterners who find it as enjoyable as its better-known relative.

ARCHERY

The bow strings twang, the arrows quiver on the target, and the ancient game of archery is in progress in this twentieth century school. This sport, long a favorite of the old-timers, is just as exciting to modern Indian maidens.

BASEBALL

In the world of sports, spring is synonymous with baseball. With the first chirp of the robin also comes the call of "batter up," and the girls, as well as boys, try out their baseball equipment.

On April 26 and 27, the auditorium was again the scene of the annual senior play. Members of the cast had developed their histrionic talents for several weeks prior to the event in order to make this year's presentation as great a success as the presentations of former years.

The play, The Torchbearers by George Kelly, was a satire on amateur dramatic performances. The production depended upon clever lines and actions, rather than upon a generally humorous situation, for laughs.

As always, a spirited debate arose over the respective merits of the two casts. The decision was given to the cast in general as having played with a degree of showmanship which pleasantly surprised even Miss Castle and Student Director Espenett, who had labored for weeks to perfect the interpretations of character by those chosen to take part.

When the Southwest orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Keenman, had finished the overture, the curtains opened to reveal the living room of the Ritter home. Mr. Ritter entered, having returned unexpectedly from a business trip. Jenny, the family maid, came in and chatted pleasantly until the entrance of the rather flighty Mrs. Ritter, who informed Mr. Ritter that a rehearsal for the play to be given at Hetchy Katchy (Horticultural Hall) was to be held at their home that evening. When Mr. Ritter heard that his wife had become an actress and that Mrs. Pampinelli was to direct, he realized that the home routine would be far different from that to which he had been accustomed.

When the cast arrived, his spirits sank still farther as he saw the hero, the egoistic Mr. Hosseltrasse, the hero's wife, the longaid Florence, the hero's newest heartthrob, his own wife Paula. The last straw appeared in the form of Mrs. Nelly Tell, the garrulous gay prompter, who never had the place at the proper time. With the questionable assistance of Mr. Spindler, the eager Teddy Sparring, and Mr. Ralph Twiller, a rather hectic rehearsal ensued, a rehearsal climaxed by the fainting of Mr. Ritter when he saw his wife act.

The second act showed the backstage at the Horticultural Hall on the night of the show. Everything possible went wrong. Mrs. Ritter tripped whenever she entered or left the stage, half of Mr. Twiller's mustache fell off, the telephone bell failed to ring, pen and paper could not be found, Teddy Sparring collapsed, and the guy rope on the curtain broke as the cast took their curtain calls.

In the third act, the Ritter home again became the scene of action. Mrs. Pampinelli, arriving before Mrs. Ritter, prepared the bouquets of flowers that were to welcome her. Mrs. Pampinelli discussed her plan with Jenny, who agreed to help arrange the surprise for Mrs. Ritter. Hearing Paula's voice as she entered the living-room, Mrs. Pampinelli hid in an alcove. Soon after Mrs. Ritter entered the living room, Mr. Ritter came from his seclusion, upstairs, to talk with his wife. In the conversation that followed, Mr. Ritter made several insulting remarks about Mrs. Pampinelli, who immediately came from her hiding place to defend her dignity. At this time, Nelly Fell arrived at the Ritter home and urged Paula to renounce her husband for such infamous statements about Mrs. Pampinelli and to continue her dramatic career. In spite of such persuasive efforts, Mrs. Ritter made the only decision which would save her home—to give up her acting career and to remain with her husband.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

The future careers of Indians were weighed in the balance on Wednesday, March 10, when the Vocational Conference of two hours was held at Southwest and the theme "Jobs and Futures" took over for the day. Forty-two speakers, chosen to represent various vocations with which Southwest students wished to become acquainted included in their speeches information concerning the requirements, training, income, popularity, specific types of work included in each vocation, and other highlights of their respective fields.

The speakers were conducted to their rooms by student ushers and introduced to their audience by student chairmen. The faculty served as sponsors. After each talk, a period was provided for questions, during which the speakers were pined with specific queries from their audiences which revealed many individual aspirations.

Each student had filled out, prior to the conference, a vocational preference card, listing his first, second and third choices. The Vocational Conference committee, when compiling these cards, tried to place each person in his first and second choices and, in most cases, were successful. Students received assignment cards in their home rooms before attending the first and second period lectures, after which all returned to their home rooms to discuss the various fields of work which had been presented to them. Thus experiences were shared and each vocational outlook was broadened by this sharing. In a seventh hour assembly the students enjoyed a technicolor movie of Kansas City which showed the vocations and careers provided here by the industrial development and growth of the city.

During the day, and for several days previous, posters prepared by the art students adorned the front hall and focused attention on the importance of making investigations concerning our life work now. Other displays emphasized Kansas City's position in business and showcasing vocational opportunities while still others showed the importance of academic subjects as a basis for choosing vocations and professions. Architectural drawings donated by the City Planning commission, showing playgrounds, recreation centers, cultural centers, and a municipal stadium, covered the walls, while the library displayed references giving aid to students seeking careers.

The vocations represented were: Accounting, Advertising, Agriculture, Army, Athletics, Aviation, Banking, Business Administration, Bayers, Chemistry, Commercial Art, Cosmetology, Dancing, Design and Costuming, Drafting, Dramatics, Engineering, both Chemical and Electrical, Industrial Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, I. B. REFLECTIONS

By Anne Isabella

In that small pool that rain has left behind,
I see the bright and sparkling light of day
In that, reflected, all the scene I find
The lofty branches stark against the gray
Of winter hills, the azure sky, a wisp
Of smoke from chimneys, drifting lazily
Into the air washed clean by rain, and crisp
With cold. More wondrous seems the world to me
When it is mirrored by a small expanse
Of water on the ground, more beautiful
Than pictures, here rewarded is the glance,
Cast down, by landscape view most wonderful
So may we see in daily life, a thing
Of unexpected charm, delight may bring

BE STILL

By Pat Crocker

Be still a moment, and listen. Let the sounds of the world about you come alive with new and fuller meaning. Forget the busy cycle of your life, forget even yourself, and quicken your senses to distinguish the countless, different noises which fill the air, making it throb and pulsate with the vigor of life. Listen to the people. Hear the children laughing and shouting at their play. Listen and smile as they repeat with solemn and earnest demeanor the bits of worldly wisdom gleaned from snatches of "big folks'" conversations. Then listen in amused silence to the tuneless humming and soft chatter of a child playing alone.

Harken to the young teenagers noisily pouring from school upon the shrill ring of the last bell. Shouting exuberantly to one another, they seem to have few eyes compatible to the joys and pleasures of their young lives. Using the interjections and adjectives popular among them, they tell each other about the day's events in quick, broken sentences typical of their generation. Listen as they talk loudly back and forth on street cars and buses, oblivious of the other passengers. Dismiss all annoyance from your mind and enjoy the frank, open manner of their speaking. They are the men and women of tomorrow. Help them; do not condemn them.

Listen to the women. Hear them tirelessly relate a long personal experience to their friends, who, in turn, pass it on down the line. Through these droning conversations they are exhibiting their individual personalities. Listen and be interested, or laugh to yourself. Listen as the housewife sings at her work. Forget the richness which her voice lacks, and, instead, recognize the richness which her life contains. Her song stems spontaneously from a heart full of love and content. Admire her, for her work is never done.

Listen to the men. Hear their low, bass voices speaking without haste or impatience. Hear everything from farm products to world affairs discussed with equal thought and importance. Find an amused ear as they leisurely swap stories, slap each other on the back, and guffaw loudly in genuine enjoyment. Listen as they argue, each stating his own opinion and stubbornly clinging to it in spite of overwhelming evidence to the contrary. Listen and laugh, perhaps, but rest secure in their solidity and strength.

Listen to the people and know that you are but one out of many. Learn to understand and appreciate them, and you will have discovered new richness added to your life.

Be still a while, and harken to the sounds of nature. Hear the wind swish ing through the trees and whistling eerily around the corners of houses, rattling the frail window panes. Listen to the low rumble of distant thunder, which gradually gains in volume until suddenly the whole universe seems to be shattered by its deafening reverberations. Then when it seems to have given out to all of its peat-up sound, the rumble fades away and once again only a few slight rumbles sift backward, like memories after thoughts. Meanwhile the rain has begun to fall with a steady, even beat. Listen to the intricate pattern it forms as it splashes down on the dry leaves, the bushes, and the cement sidewalks.

As spring approaches, listen for the sounds which usher it in. Hear the chirping notes of the returning robins, swallows, thrushes, and thrushes. Listen for the chirp of the cricket, the shrill hum of the katydid, and the coarse buzzing of the tree toad. Soon the sharp barking of the red squirrel also penetrates the warm, heavy air, forming a definite contrast to the soft cooing of the downy turtle doves. Hear the gurgling melody of the rippling streams, which, swollen from the melting snows, bump merrily along over the smooth rocks and stones in their midst. Listen for the hoarse croaking of the old bull frogs down in the meadow pond. As the twilight deepens, their rising voices are raised in a deep, bass chorus.

Harken to the accents of nature and find solace in their company. Pass not by the cool forest, the sunny meadow, or the sparkling stream without pausing a moment to catch the vibrant cadence of the great symphony of sound composed and directed by an unseen hand.

Be still a moment and listen to the sounds of a modern age. Analyze the perpetual hubbub of the city for once, instead of becoming so accustomed to it that you seldom notice it. As you walk down a street on a warm summer day, you might hear the intermittent drone of lawn-mowers in the yards and hoovers inside the houses. The loud staccato beat of an electric drill used in street repair might upset your equilibrium for a time. Farther on, the clatter of street-cars and the rumble of busses are sure to greet your ears. The shrill siren of a police car, a fire engine, or an ambulance quite possibly might rip through the busy hum of the city and set your spine tingling with vague apprehension. Yes, walk down any street of a large city, and you might hear every one of these sounds.

Stepping into a large office building or a department store, listen for the steady clacking of typewriters and teletype machines, and the raucous clang of the cash register. Hear the rush of the elevators, the jangling of telephones, and the busy clicking of telephone switch boards. Then, as you emerge once more, notice the swishing sound of the revolving doors which usher you swiftly out to the sidewalk in spite of yourself. They seem to be laughing to themselves, as if they had just played a good joke on you by giving you a little shove on your way out.

Hark ye to the sounds which re-echo through the city, and marvel at man's progress through the ages. Let it be an incentive to carry on to even greater heights the creative intelligence of mankind.

Be still a moment, and listen. Hear with a new consciousness, a greater alertness, a deeper understanding, the great intermingling of sounds which fall constantly upon your ears. Be still, and become acquainted with your world.

MORNING IN THE GARDEN

By Lois Longfellow

The morning sun has risen to the roof-tops, and shines through the thick, lacy boughs of a cedar tree, casting a broken shadow on my garden path. Two new crocuses have sprung from their brown beds to announce that soon the young green leaves of their neighbors will appear beside them along the path that leads from winter into spring. Their fat buds gradually swell into golden blooms, bright buttons on the dull brown dress of Mother Earth. Sturdy beds of iris stand firmly planted in the cold ground with curled oak leaves caught between them. Soon they will push up stems lined with large green cocoons, from which tender purple petals will emerge like the new wings of a butterfly. Some tiny hands will carefully place them beside spring tulips in a paper May basket. Near the house, I open a small hot-bed made of orange crate boards whose moist soil once hid the promising seeds planted there only a month ago. Scattered specks of green now begin their long task of growing into sturdy ver-bena plants for my early summer border.

This morning, walking amid the sleeping plants, I think of my garden as a friend. Here a small patch of ground holds beneath its rich surface the permanent roots of two old day-lily plants, which, although absent for a brief period each year, have always returned with the spring to renew an eternal friendship. From the time I first brought them from the flats of a neighborhood greenhouse and firmly patted the loam of a newly worked bed about them, they have given pleasure through many seasons. With the hoeing and weeding of a few Saturday mornings it was not long until, spreading their young roots and thirstily drinking from the garden hose, they surprised me with a large flaming blossom—a miniature sun, proudly glowing from a long, stiff stem. I watched it through that summer day until, as its brilliant counterpart was lowering in the sky, the proud petals slowly curled to hide their golden splendor for another year.

There in the corner, my first spring robin cocks his attentive head close to the ground as though eavesdropping on edible young worms. Beneath his tiny claws lies the moist soil over which petunias will spread their purple, come July. These plants have had a background more unusual than a sunny green house, and each year I remember where I first found them. As I was driving along a dusty country road one summer day, a brilliant bed of flowers in the front yard of a small, weathered shack caught my eye. Following the instinctive curiosity of a gardener, I turned into the driveway. As I lifted a hand to knock, the door opened. A middle-aged woman stood before me with a surprised yet happy expression on her face. When my sudden visit had been explained, her eyes sparkled. She turned to reach for something, then came out onto the stoop, clutching in her calloused hands a tarnished kitchen knife and a small wooden box labeled "Superb Chicken Feed." We walked to the flower bed where she knelt to uproot some petunias—the ones her generous heart considered choicest. While she was digging, I saw that a morning glory vine was stretching slender, hooked fingers along an unpainted board fence, and, beside the tin mail box, a bleached red bucket stood partly submerged in rocky dirt, its sunken head topped with a mass of portulaca. Surrounded by endless dry prairies and four bleak walls, this farmer's wife found in her garden hidden beauty—a beauty that would flower even through dire poverty. Handing the box to me, she refused to take even a penny, and as I slowly drove away from the house, I realized that the carefully wrapped plants beside me might well have been the only things she owned that someone else would want.

Soon this corner patch will grow bright with those same purple blossoms, and, as I hand a bouquet across the fence to my neighbor, I shall remember that generous gift. But now I turn to a budding rose bush which is waiting to be placed in a hole near the wren house. A small pile of earth must be shoveled about its stiff roots, now wrapped in damp peat moss. Slipping on some flat garden shoes, their bulging leather shaped to fit my spreading toes, I take care that the mud-caked soles dodge each tiny shoot. Scattered mounds of autumn leaves give out a woodsy odor as my rake uncovers those beneath, still wet from melted snow. On a wooden stake I read the words, "Dark Splendor," the newcomer to my rose bed. Layers of soil and plant food settle about its roots until only a small red sprout is seen above the chill ground. A tall, old rose bush nearby has already sent out a handsome sprig of leaves—a fine head-start in its annual attempt to bloom before the energetic climber on the garage. From the time the first bud emerges, I shall go out each day to mark the slow swelling of its crimson interior until a week of sunny days will have unfolded every petal. It is the season's first red rose, and I dare not pluck it. At the appearance of their leader, one by one the others open. Some evening I shall come outside to find Annie, our colored maid, secretly admiring their soft beauty. At my invitation, she will point to her favorites and I shall give them into her hand. They will glow like flames against her dark skin.

Now the rose planting is finished. I empty my spade and rest a moment on the stone bench. All is quiet. Always the garden is quiet, and yet it seems that flowers continually are speaking a language of secret language more eloquent than is ever expressed by the tongues of men. In moments of greatest joy or in depths of sorrow they seem to speak of a love and thoughtfulness which could belong only to a superior being. To me, the wonder and beauty of their creation is ample proof of the existence of a living God. Rising from the bench, I take a final glance at the promising brown beds and remember these words of George Bernard Shaw: "The best place to seek God is in a garden. You can dig for Him there."

REGENERATION

By L. J. S. S. S. S.

As John Lamson approached the minister's study, the door opened, and a parishoner emerged. When the young assistant rector saw the look of perplexity and disappointment on the man's countenance, he recalled how often recently he had noticed such an expression on the faces of those who had come to his superior for aid, for it bewildered many people, the great change which had taken place in Paul Adams since his son's death at Salerno. Before that tragedy, he had been a person to whom others easily turned. Now, however, his features, which had hardened into an aspect of forbidding sternness and impatience, repelled them. He rarely practiced the altruism upon which his calling was based, and had become almost an introvert. Even his wife was shut out.

John Lamson loved Paul, and therefore felt a great pity for him. He had seen how much the older man had agonized over his loss. He had watched him at first build up a wall of reserve to block the sympathy which seemed more like salt than balm to his wound. Then, John had seen bitterness creep gradually into the sorrow, until now, Paul, who had advised others to accept their misfortunes as the will of God, rebelled when a similar burden was laid upon his own heart.

All this passed through John's mind as he hesitated a moment before the study door. Finally, entering the room, he was not surprised at the brusque tone of Paul's greeting. "Oh, good morning, John. Mrs. Webber just called. She wants me to come over to hear about her arthritis, but I can't think of doing that today. I'm trying to find a subject for next week's sermon, so would you mind making the call for me?"

"No, sir, not at all. If you don't need me here, I think I might as well go now."

"Thank you. It will be a great help."

After John had departed, Paul arose from his chair, and went to gaze out of the open window. Although the April sun beat down warmly, he shuddered.
It was as though he had wrapped the blackness of his spirit about him so tightly and so thickly that no heat could penetrate it. Irritably, he wondered how he could write a sermon when an iron band seemed to encircle his head, the pressure increasing, then diminishing, from the car, succeeded. The stretcher bearers put him on the litter, and started toward the ambulance, but, when he screamed with pain, they laid the stretcher gently on the ground. A middle-aged woman hovered over him. She looked about frantically, then, spying Paul, she approached him. As she drew near, she hesitated, for Paul wore his sternest look, but, driven by desperate need, she came on. Paul was shocked to recognize her as a Mrs. Wallace, one of his parishioners. "Please, Mr. Adams," she said, "won't you come and say something to Bill? He needs somebody to make him feel better. He's—I'm afraid won't you please come?"

Paul crossed the street with Mrs. Wallace, and stood looking down at Bill. The boy's face was streaked with blood and the sweat of his agony. He looked up at Paul from under the mop of his disordered hair.

"Hello, Mr. Adams," he said timidly.

"Hello, Bill," Paul replied briefly.

"I'm awfully sorry, Mr. Adams. It was all my fault," the boy faltered through stiff lips; "I heard them say the driver was . . . I heard he . . ." As another spasm of pain seized hold of him, his breath came in short gasps. He looked with desperate appeal at Paul.

The latter had censured Bill a few minutes before, with justice, he thought, but now he became conscious of a weakening, a doubt. He could not help a feeling of compassion which had begun to creep into his heart. However, did one deserve pity who had so carelessly brought death to another? The question caused Paul to frown with concentration. The boy saw the frown and mistook it for one of condemnation. A look of terror widened his eyes. He turned to his mother: "Mom, do you think . . ." He never finished the sentence, for suddenly his head dropped; he was dead.

Mrs. Wallace caught hold of her son's hand with both of hers as though to bring life back to him by means of the warmth of her touch. Then she turned fiercely upon Paul. "You call yourself a minister. Then why couldn't you have said just one word to comfort him? He wasn't a bad boy, but you made him think he was. You're so full of your own bitterness! You aren't fit to be a minister!" Breaking into racking sobs, she turned her back on Paul, who, stunned, was still looking down at the boy, for he had not conceived how critical were Bill's injuries. The realization that he had failed to give solace to one who was dying horrified him. In his last hour, even the most callous murderer was granted the services of a clergyman.

A flood of emotions surged up within Paul, and, turning, he hurried blindly down the street toward the church. He did not enter by the side door, as was usual with him, but passed through the heavy doors of the main entrance. As soon as he reached the very back pew of the empty church, he flung himself upon his knees, like the humblest of penitents. A sense of guilt overwhelmed him. He felt hot, and his heart beat so fast that he was conscious of the blood drumming in his ears. The iron band about his head was tighter than ever, and the constriction in his chest oppressed him so that he had difficulty in breathing. The livid face of the dead boy was still with him. Would he ever be able to forget that look of terror which he had inspired? His remorse knew no bounds.

Mrs. Wallace's remark about his unworthiness cut him deeply, but he now knew how truly she had spoken. He was unworthy. Not only had he assumed God's office in passing judgment upon a dying youth, but he had even defied the will of God in demanding why He had taken Alan from him. Even now, here was further proof of his egotism. What right had he to say "from him" when his wife had been equally bereft? How cruel he had been to her when she had tried to console him! He was appalled when he saw to what depths his selfishness had brought him. With his hands clasped before him so tensely that the knuckles showed white, he prayed, at times almost groaning in his earnestness. He begged forgiveness for his "hardness of heart and for contempt of God's Word and Commandment.

Hours later, when he lifted his bowed head, relief flooded through his being, for all pain was gone. He had passed through a crisis which had left him physically exhausted, but, spiritually, he had at last begun to find peace once more.

THE SISSY

By Merry Ann Waterman

A huge, green fly buzzing crazily about the room, settled for an instant on Johnny's nose. Sleepily the boy brushed him off, but the fly was persistent, returning, time after time, to torment him. Gradually, other sensations and sounds filtered into his consciousness; the bawling of the calves, the clucking of a hen reassuring her shrill brood, the creaking of a rusty pump; the smell of lilacs and fresh-baked cinnamon rolls. The puzzled, groggy expression left Johnny's face as his eyes flew open. He remembered, now—he was out on the farm. It always took him a while to figure out where he was when he awakened from a sound sleep. He had come to live with his grandparents while his daddy was overseas.

"Johnny, hurry, or you'll be late for school," called his grandmother.

He lay still a few minutes, breathing the clear, sweet air.

"Oh, everything would just be swell if I just didn't have to go to that darned old school." Tenderly rubbing a slightly discolored eye, he bitterly thought over the misery of the last few months. The boys hooted at everything he said and did. They made fun of his clothes, and, even after his grandfather had made a special trip to town for some jeans, they still poked fun at him because his jeans were not worn and faded. They called him a "sissey!" He hated to fight all of the time, but a fella had his pride.

Coming into the pleasant kitchen, so bright and cheerful, and full of yummy smells, he found his grandparents lingering at the breakfast table, reading the morning mail, which was delivered at the front gate very early in the morning.

"I see in the paper where some of those German prisoners . . ."

"Oh, John," interrupted his grandmother, joyously, "Fred is coming home for a furlough. He'll arrive at the junction at 10:00 A.M., April second. Let's see—why, that's today! Mercy, we'll have to hurry and get to town, so that I'll have time to get my groceries before his train comes in. Let's see—Fred likes . . ." Grandma was bustling around planning menus for the next few days, making sure to include all of her youngest son's favorite dishes. "Johnny, you'll have to get yourself ready for school. Be sure to allow yourself plenty of time."

The house was strange and quiet after the folks left. Johnny went up to his room. There was that old fly again. Must be Spring. Guess he'd better put on that screen. It wouldn't take a minute, for he knew right where they were. He'd seen them up in the attic yesterday. But it took longer than he had planned, for, as he rummaged around looking for the screen, he came across a fishing rod complete with line and sinker. A pleasant smile lit up his face as he picked it up.

"Boy, oh boy, wish I could go try out this old rod in the creek. I sure would if it wasn't for that old school. But that belonged to my Dad. He treasured it lovingly, then sighing regretfully he laid it down and made his way slowly down stairs, his original errand to the store forgotten. His mind was full of the stories that his father had told him of his youthful escapades on the farm.

Dreamily, he walked down the rough, rutted road, scuffing his shoes along in a manner calculated to do the most possible damage to their smooth, shiny surfaces. Coming to the bridge over the big stream that bordered the farm he paused lost in the stories of the past. His father and Uncle Fred used to have great times—fishing and playing in this water. A little way upstream the surface broke into a big ripple—only a very big fish could make that, he thought.

Suddenly, the tremendous idea came to him. He would run back to the house and get the fishing rod, and catch that big fish as a special treat for his Uncle Fred.

The heavy feet, which had so reluctantly dragged along the road a few minutes before, now flew over the fresh, new grass as he raced across the pasture. He burst into the kitchen, then stopped short in amazement. A strange man in uniform was helping himself to food from the refrigerator.

"Why, Uncle Fred," he cried. "How did you get here so soon? Didn't you see Grandma and Grandpa? They went into town to meet you. Haven't you had your breakfast? Here let me—"

The man became rigid, his hand crept to his side, but, as Johnny rattled on, he became more relaxed, the fear in his eyes abated somewhat. He was on the alert, however.

"Hurry, Son. So the folks are gone. Did they leave you here all by yourself?"

"Yes, I am supposed to be in school, but I saw a big fish down in the brook, and I came back to get the rod to catch him as a surprise for you."

"You'd better get back to school. Your Vater won't like it if he comes home and catches you," the man growled.

Suddenly a cold hand of fear clutched Johnny around the throat. He could scarcely breathe, but he had presence of mind enough to keep on taking the rolls out of the breadbox and putting them on the table. This man was not his Uncle Fred. He must be a thief. He must not let him know that he suspected anything, and maybe he could think of some way to head him until his real Uncle Fred came. But he'd know how to handle him.

"Oh, that's all right. They won't be back until late this afternoon, and they'll never know that I played hooky, unless you tell on me. I have been wanting to anyway. I hate this school—"

Johnny broke off. Suddenly he realized that what he was about to say was not the truth. He wished with all his might that he was safe in the little school, away from this lonely house and this cold-eyed stranger. Prickles of panic played up and down his spine. It was all that he could do to control his feet, to keep them from running out the door.

Casually, he picked up the teapot and looked inside. All of Grandma's chicken money was gone! Why, the big lug, he was not going to get away with that! The nerve of him! His anger drove out fear and stiffened his resolve not to let the man get away. He had been playing with the idea of going back to school, and letting the man escape, but now he realized that he could never do that. Hadn't he promised to be a brave soldier, and to take care of Grandma and Grandpa while Daddy was away.

He must think of some way to trap this thief—but how? Crazy schemes glanced through the heavy mist, as he watched the stranger warily cut the food that he had placed before him. He could see that the man believed his story, and was no longer worried about the return of his folks. Johnny kept placing more food on the table, trying to keep the man occupied as long as possible. It was really amazing how much food the man was able to eat. It got to be a sort of game with Johnny while he was frantically trying to make some plans. Finally the man pushed back his chair.

"Grandpa, said you're crazy about sugar-cured ham," Johnny said in desperation. "There's lots of it in the smokehouse. If you'll help me get one down, we can try some. Believe I'd like some too."

"Good," a crafty look came into the man's eyes. "Didn't you say you wanted to go fishing? Let's make a big lunch to take along."

Johnny fairly held his breath. His plan was working—or at least it appeared to be, if nothing went wrong. They went into the dim smokehouse, where the hams and bacon were hanging from the rafters. While the soldier got upon an old stool to lift down one of the heavy hams, Johnny darted out the door, and slamming it shut, he locked it securely.

Immediately things began to happen in the smokehouse, with wild curses uttered in a strange guttural language. The man threw himself time after time at the door, but Johnny saw with great relief that the door held firm. He began to stake all over, and abruptly his legs gave way and he sat down.

Just then two cars turned out on the avenue. With a huge sigh of relief, he ran to meet his folks.

"Grandpa, I've got a bad, old soldier locked up in the smokehouse. The dirty old crook tried to steal my Grandma's chicken money. He—he—" In his excitement the words tumbled all over each other. He did not notice the looks of apprehension on his grandparents' faces, for his attention was diverted to the five men with drawn guns who were getting out of the other car.

"That must be the man that we are looking for. We tracked him to this neighborhood. To think, that little sinner caught the most dangerous of all the escaped German prisoners of war," said the sheriff.

That night, as he crawled into his bed, under the supervision of his very proud creek, Johnny gave a great yawn of contentment. He reached up to caress his daddy's D.S.C. which Uncle Fred, with solemn ceremony, had pinned to his pajamas. "I just can't wait until I get to school in the morning. I spect it's the very bestest school in all the land." And with another big yawn, the "sissy" was fast asleep.

All through the year the students worked through organizations which helped to make their other activities possible. And in all of these fields they were rewarded by the many honors which arrived in the spring. The faculty and students felt satisfied that the goal for which they had striven throughout the year had been attained.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Fashioned by God with symmetry of rhyme, Sown deep in hope's interminable soil,
Nurtured by ancient myth and fed by time
Preserved by ageless poets' lofty toil,— Laurel, thy great and everlasting fame,
Symbol of glory, faultless honor's prize,
Acknowledges thy long respected name
Which chroniclers of life immortalize,
Princes or kings or soldiers in the field,
Widows or wives or queens of wide renown
From age to age protect the cherished shield
Of honor and receive the laurel crown.
Long after he is dead whom fame bespoke,
His praises ring, for honor was his cloak.

The Green Cross Teacher Council, Pedestrians' Club, Checker Club and Lo-Y will meet tonight after school.

As Indian summer fades and vernal leaves
Begin the change to amber, golden hues,
The chilling wind of fall blows full, and cleaves
Them quickly from the bough with force which strews
The ground with flame. But when the earth is deep
In russet piles, the oak tree may remain
With leaves which bravely live as others sleep,
And rule through lonely days a bare domain.
Like oak leaves, strong when many others die,
A loyal deed survives in memory.
The lighter things may, unremembered, lie
In shadow, but in service we foresee
A future, leaving lesser feats behind
Which lives eternally within the mind.

Societies

From year to year the poets leave unsung
The bands of earnest folk who day by day
Gather together and with pen or tongue
Pursue a diligent, uncharted way;
Who, hand in hand, strive toward a common end,
Each lightening the other's heavy load,
Each turning back to aid a stumbling friend
Avoid the stones, and showing him the road
On which to go. So in another age
Through wildernesses arm in arm they came,
Signing their names to history's broad page,
As brothers, following a single aim,
Seeing with vision, clearer, freer, then
The preciousness of brotherhood to men.

[illegible]

As we, the SAC staff of 1968, present this book to you, we do it with the hope that you may have as much real satisfaction in owning it as we have had in writing and publishing it, and that through its pages, you will be better able to remember and relive all the experiences of this past year at Southwest.
